

CLASSROOM STRUGGLE presents

Show Us the Money!

From OUSD's Manufactured Budget Crisis to the Schools Oakland Families Deserve

- A forum to:
- discuss the current status of finances in Oakland Unified
 - discuss privatization of public schools and its relationship to "school choice"
 - discuss the teaching/learning conditions that students need
 - build alliances between parents, teachers and students

Tuesday
November 14
5 – 7 pm

Eastside Arts Alliance
2277 International Blvd., Oakland

Childcare, Food, Spanish
Translation provided

Did you know OUSD spends the most of any Alameda County district on administration and private contractors? OUSD claims it is committed to educational equity but has refused to pay for equitable teaching and learning conditions. The latest form of this is called the "The Blueprint for Quality Schools," which threatens a new round of program cuts and school closures. OEA (the teachers' union) is currently bargaining for the conditions necessary for quality education: smaller class size and caseloads, more prep time, and fair compensation to keep diverse, experienced teachers.

Classroom Struggle is a group of OUSD educators, parents, and community allies fighting for the best possible education for our students and a society based on racial and social justice. Find us on Facebook.